PREFACE

When I, [Zeano L. Moss], was about two years old, my family moved out of the Jackie Cove, on Shooting Creek, N.C., to Bell Creek, which was across the Flea Mountain on the Georgia side. The small house we moved to sat on the point of Lloyd Ridge, which was a foothill of the Flea Mountain. The farm was approximate 40 to 50 acres, of which more than half was solid woodland. There was the House, Barn, Corn Crib, Smoke House, and a very small one room Log Cabin, where my Grandmother, Rhoda E. Moss, lived.

When it rained you could see and hear it coming up on the mountain, minutes before it reached our rooftop. When one walked out onto the porch in the morning, or any other time, the first thing you would see, was the BELL MOUNTAIN. In fact our front porch was probably the most advantageous point in the whole Bell Creek Valley, to view Bell Mountain.

Our house consisted of four rooms and a walk about attic. There was the kitchen, the living room, that also served as our parent's bed room, one bed room for the girls, one for some of the older boys, and the rest of us boys slept in the attic. The house had no insulation, except for "Grit" newspapers, and some wallpaper. It was heated by one, open, wood burning fire place, and a wood burning stove in the kitchen. There was no electricity until I was about 15 or 16 years old. Strangely, I do not recall getting excessively cold in the winter, nor very hot during the summer months. My Father and Mother raised nine children in that very small four room house. My younger brother and I alternated spending every night with Grandmother Moss in her log Cabin which was perhaps 150 yards or so from the main house. She lived in that Cabin, {later converted to a plain lumber shack}, for more than 20 years, before moving in with my Dad and Mom, just a couple of years before she died. She had two feather beds, Cook Stove, Dining Table, and a Cupboard, in the way of furniture. She cooked on both the stove and open fire place. Her specialties were Corn Bread, cooked in a Dutch oven, over open coals, in the fire place, and blackberry cobbler, made from wild black berries she picked herself, and left over biscuits from breakfast. This she served with large glasses of butter milk, cooled in the natural spring that came out under a rock on Lloyd Ridge. After milking the cows, late on summer evenings, I used to sit on the porch steps and watch the fireflies light up the dusk. It was very common to hear the Red Fox barking way up on Lloyd Ridge in the dusk, as the whippoorwills serenaded all of Bell Creek. Their music was always my lullaby, as long as I lived at home. As of this writing, the shell of the old homeplace, [minus doors and windows], and Grandmothers little one room shack, still stands. No matter where I go, Lloyd Ridge will always seem like the true essence of home to me!

The View From Lloyd Ridge

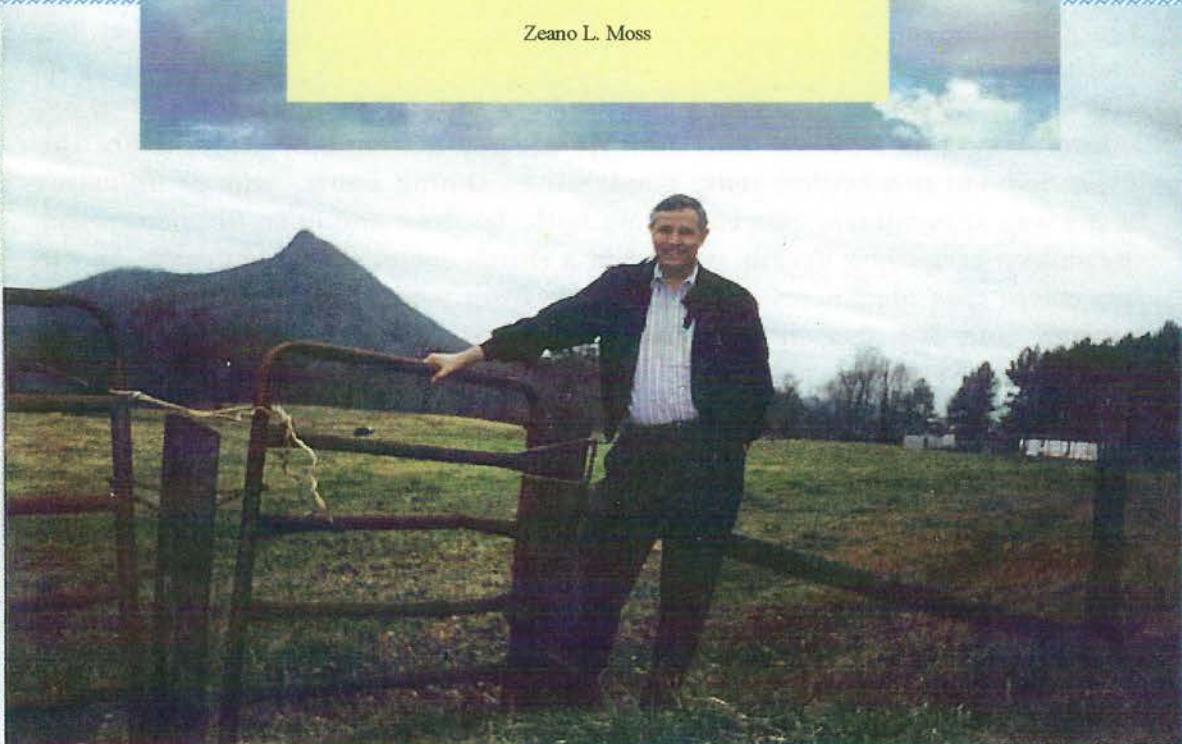

—o—

Ten thousand dollars in greenback,
Or, so the old folks say;
Is the price they got, when times were hard,
For Lloyd Ridge, My old home place.
Forty acres of barefoot memories,
They measured, [more or less]
And childhood sunshine, now long gone,
Lost in the yearning dusk.

How can one ever reconcile,
The price of a shattered dream?
Now gone forever on the wind,
Far and away—, [beyond my means.]

But oh, Lloyd Ridge, my roots, my all,
I'll never let you go—
Though you were bought by others,
So many years ago.
You'll be my homeplace, now and ever,
[No matter, the deed denies—]
And dawn and dusk, I'll view Bell Mountain,
Until the day I die!

The Gems of Bell Mountain

—o—

Rare gems are there, so runs the tale,
Atop Bell Mountain, hard to scale.
We sought them once, on that lofty place,
But, elusive treasure hid it's face.

Then, a view of heaven flashed on my soul,
[THE BELL CREEK of my childhood, far below]
In a trice I knew I had found the Gem,
Bell Creek afar, in the valley dim—

My childhood dominion, from primal years, on—
'Gem of Bell Mountain', my ancestral home!

Bell Creek sits like a deep cup, completely surrounded by the BLUE RIDGE Mountains. There is only two ways in or out of the community. Up through the Low Gap, which divides the Flea Mountain and Garland Mountain—, and/or, down the Bell Creek road, which runs by the foot of Bell Mountain and south toward Hiawassee. Bell Creek, [the antebellum Tea Cup made by God's own hand], is forever, beautifully surrounded by the FLEA, GARLAND, EAGLE, and BELL mountains. They are all a part of the BLUE RIDGE MOUNTAIN range. Though I should roam the world over—, this pastoral valley, was, and shall ever be, MY BELOVED ANCESTRAL HOME!

Once—, I had a little grandson,
Just as handsome as could be;
His father called him 'JEREMY',
And he meant the world to me.

But, God wanted another angel,
To help sing the angel's songs;
And sent a choir of baby angels,
To carry our Jeremy home.

Now, sometimes on Sunday morning,
I can see him sitting there—
I hear the sweetest, far-off music,
Of, a baby angel's choir.

I close my eyes in wonderment,
At the beauty of these things;
And on my fevered brow, I feel,
The brush of baby angel wings.

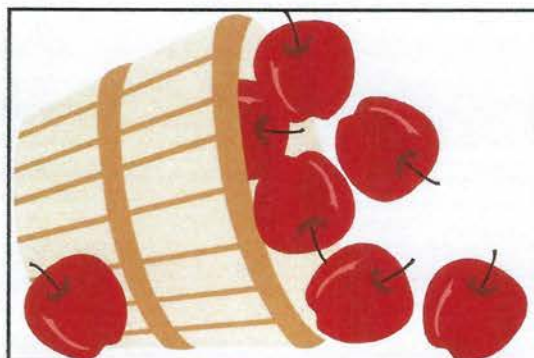

I follow the music, just as far as I can,
Then, come back across a million miles;
I open my eyes, a lonely old man—
Until, he looks at me and smiles!

GRANDMOTHER MOSS

—o—
I remember my grandmother well,
Far away, and long ago;
When I was just a tow-head lad,
Before—, I began to grow.

She baked the finest cornbread,
In a skillet, over open coals;
The aromas made you hungry,
From your head, down to your toe's.

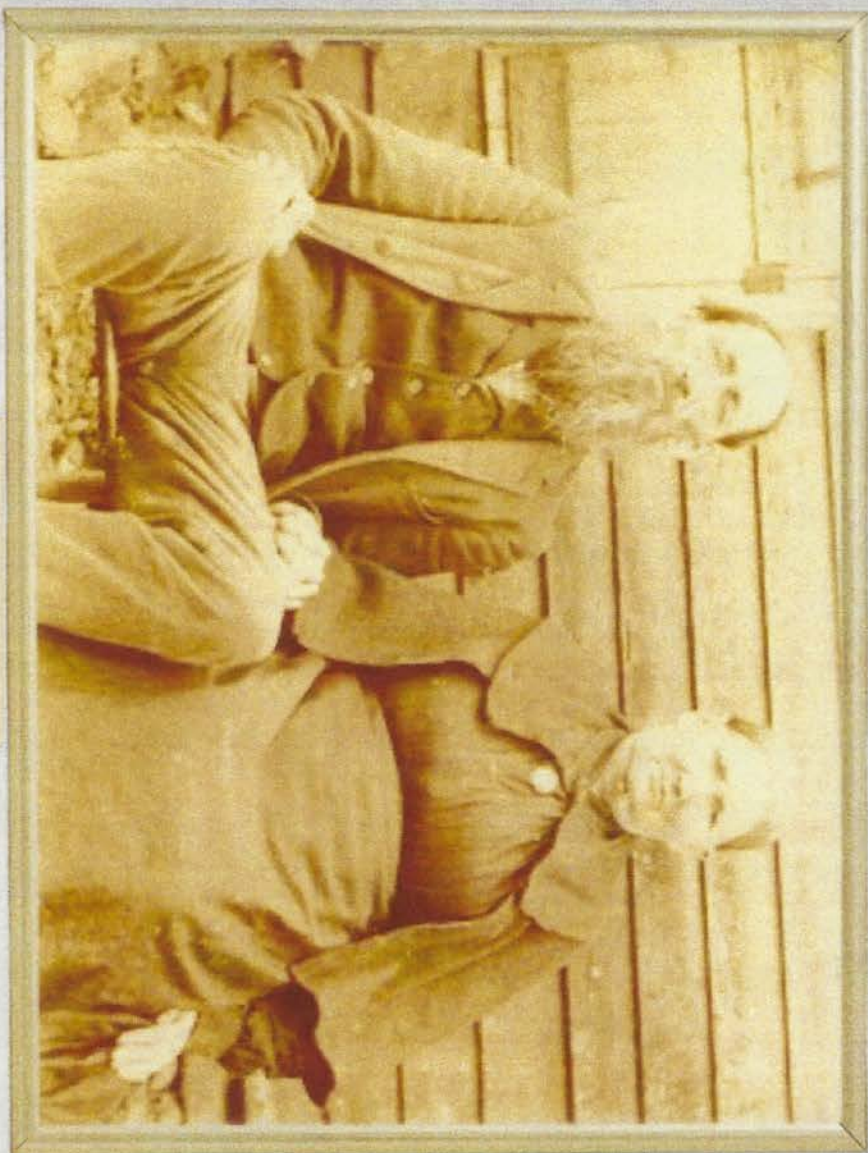

Then, she'd cut a fresh slice for me,
While it was still piping hot;
I felt like the King of Lloyd Ridge,
When she put fresh butter on the top.

She used to make blackberry cobbler,
With left over biscuits, and loving hands;
And—, the feather bed in her cabin,
Was the snuggest place in all the land.

Now she's moved—, [from cabin to Heaven],
I wonder if she bakes any more—
For tow-headed angels, just arrived,
On that far off peaceful shore.

Taps on Charlie's Creek

—O—

Hardy loved the southland and his family,
Went away to fight their war;
Now he lies neath mountain sky,
And his Dixie stars.

I think I knew him well,
Soldier, farmer, father, friend;
And his deep love for country,
[Family farm], the sun and wind—

His stalwart breed goes on forever,
[Southern custom and their creeds—]

And proud I am to be a part,
Of his many seed.

Now, somewhere far above me,
No matter where I'm going;
High on the mountain, [above Charlie's Creek,]
I hear southern taps a-blowing.

Surrender of Vicksburg, Mississippi

4 July 1863 – by Lieut. General, John C. Pemberton

Confederate States of America

Vicksburg and Port Hudson

At about the time that Lee was moving toward defeat at Gettysburg, General Ulysses S. Grant began a campaign to secure Union control of the Mississippi River between Vicksburg, Mississippi, and Port Hudson, Louisiana. Vicksburg was situated on a heavily fortified bluff overlooking the Mississippi and the swamplands of the Yazoo River. Grant spent the first three months of 1863 unsuccessfully trying to outflank Confedererate General John Pemberton in the Yazoo swamps. Failing to do so, Grant adopted a bolder strategy.

In April Union troops marched unnoticed south of Vicksburg while a fleet of Union gunboats floated silently downstream past Vicksburg, their engines and lights turned off. The gunboats then ferried the Union troops to the east bank of the Mississippi River.

Grant's men, carrying only four days' rations, marched east across Mississippi into enemy territory. After a series of small victories, they captured the state capital of Jackson on May 14. Grant then abruptly reversed his march and headed back to Vicksburg, arriving only 18 days after he had left.

Union forces now surrounded Vicksburg. After a six-week siege the Confederates surrendered on July 4, 1863—the day after the Battle of Gettysburg ended.

On July 9 Port Hudson fell to Union forces. Two black regiments, spurred on by the heroism of Captain Andre Callious, were instrumental in the victory. The fall of Vicksburg and Port Hudson placed the entire Mississippi River in Union hands. The western grip of the anaconda was now firm. The Confederacy's position was becoming steadily more desperate.

Generation No. 2

2. HARDY WASHINGTON² ELLER, CIVIL WAR SOLDIER (JACOB [JAKE]¹) was born July 16, 1843 in Rabun County Ga., and died April 11, 1908. He married MARTHA JANE GARRETT March 31, 1865 in Towns County, Ga..

Notes for HARDY WASHINGTON ELLER, CIVIL WAR SOLDIER:

During the Civil War, Hardy enlisted in Company E., 52nd. Regiment, Georgia Volunteer Infantry, Confederate States of America. His Company was called the Hiawasse Rangers. Whatever other action Hardy saw during the war, it is a documented fact that he fought in the six-week seige of Vicksburg, Mississippi, under General John Pemberton. When Vicksburg fell into the hands of the Union Army, [led by General Grant], on July 4, 1863, Hardy was taken Prisoner of War. General John Pemberton [Confederate General] surrendered Vicksburg to General Grant [Union Army], that same day. This paved the way for the release or "Parole" for most of the prisoners [including Hardy] a few days later. In late 1863 records show that he was in, or near the battle of "Lookout Valley, Tenn.

According to Pension records, Hardy was shot through the right thigh, just below the groin, while walking guard or "Picket" duty, about two miles from Chatanooga, Tenn. A Mr. M. G. Edmonds, states in the record, "I was present with him that day, and saw the doctors field-dress his wound." In early January 1864, Hardy was taken to a hospital near Atlanta, Georgia, where he was "Furloughed" on wounded leave. He was at home in Towns County still recouping when the war ended.

Children of HARDY ELLER and MARTHA GARRETT are:

- i. JESSE³ ELLER, b. September 1881.
- ii. WASHINGTON ELLER, b. September 1883.

Descendants of John Joseph Vann IV

Generation No. 1

1. JOHN JOSEPH¹ VANN IV. He married (1) AGNES WEATHERFORD. He married (2) [CHEROKEE INDIAN WIFE], NAME UNKNOWN.

Notes for JOHN JOSEPH VANN IV:

Legend has it that John Joseph Vann IV was the son of a Scotch Trader with the Cherokee Indians. And that while living with one Agnes Weatherford, John Vann IV, also had a Cherokee Indian [girlfriend]. John and his Cherokee girlfriend had a daughter, and named her "KEZIAH VANN". After her birth, John and Agnes parted ways.

In addition to KEZIAH, six other children were born to the Vann/Cherokee union. They were, John David Vann, CHIEF JAMES CLEMENTS VANN, Nancy Vann, Alice Vann, Nan Vann, and Mary Vann.

The Name of John Vann's Cherokee Wife is not mentioned.

It is through the lineage of "KEZIAH VANN", that the MOSS FAMILY share the Cherokee Indian heritage.

Children of JOHN VANN and [CHEROKEE WIFE] are:

2.
 - i. KEZIAH² VANN, b. 1761; d. December 20, 1849.
