

Robert Woodson Eller

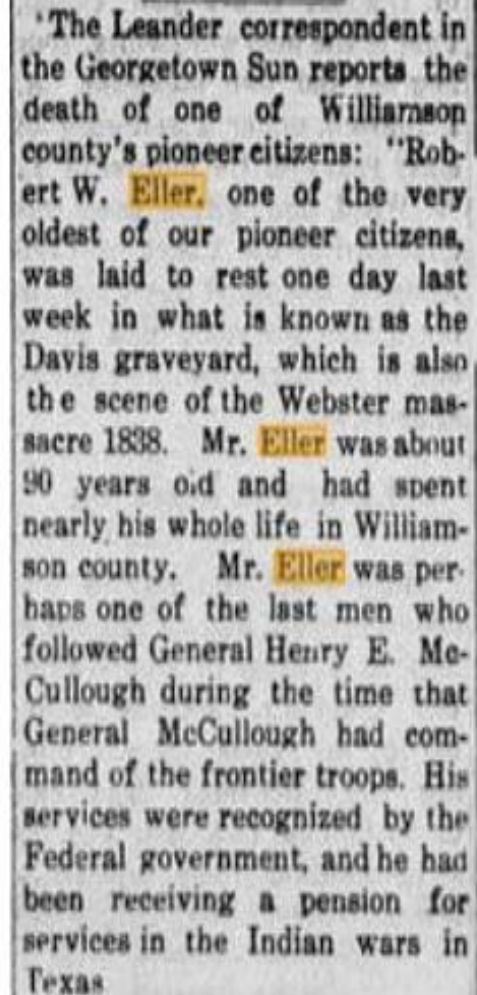

Robert W. Eller was the son of John Jacob Eller III and Susannah McCarty. He was born April 6, 1827 in Cooper County Missouri and died November 18, 1915 in Williamson County Texas. Robert Eller was the 3rd great grandfather of Robert Baggerly.

The Bartlett Tribune and News (Bartlett, Tex.), Vol. 30, No. 25, Ed. 1, Friday, December 3, 1915

The Leander correspondent in the Georgetown Sun reports the death of one of Williamson County's pioneer citizens: "Robert W Eller one of the very oldest of our pioneer citizens was laid to rest one day last week in what is known as Davis Graveyard which was the scene of the Webster Massacre 1838.

Mr. Eller was about 90 years old and spent nearly his whole life in Williamson County. Mr. Eller was perhaps one of the last men who followed General Henry E McCullough during the time that General McCullough had commanded the frontier troops.

His service was recognized by the Federal Government and he had been receiving a pension for his service in the Indian Wars in Texas.

The Leander correspondent in the Georgetown Sun reports the death of one of Williamson county's pioneer citizens: "Robert W. Eller, one of the very oldest of our pioneer citizens, was laid to rest one day last week in what is known as the Davis graveyard, which is also the scene of the Webster massacre 1838. Mr. Eller was about 90 years old and had spent nearly his whole life in Williamson county. Mr. Eller was perhaps one of the last men who followed General Henry E. McCullough during the time that General McCullough had command of the frontier troops. His services were recognized by the Federal government, and he had been receiving a pension for services in the Indian wars in Texas